TO PETCH

PETCH IVAN PETCH

PETCH: G'day

Hi Ivan can you speak briefly?

PETCH: Yeh mate.

Mr Neish is gone?

PETCH: Yep.

Did the ratepayers have to pay him out?

PETCH: We had to pay in accordance with his contract and severance (unintelligible)

Right. And it (unintelligible)

PETCH: Mate had he stopped on here it would have been an astronomic bill.

Yes.

PETCH: I think it's the lesser of two evils.

Hmm I'm not arguing that at all has he already got a nice cosy job to go to?

PETCH: He's working with as I understand it we didn't know that at the time but he's since sent us an email and use to be the and he's now.

Yes he.

PETCH: And he's now got a consulting (unintelligible)

Right so he moves into that magical world of a consultant does he?

PETCH: That's right he does.

Yeh well I don't wish him the best of luck.

PETCH: No none of us do mate.

No.

PETCH: You know why how we caught him out don't you?

: No.

PETCH: Downloading porn.

Oh truly.

PETCH: Yep I got the I got the CD the whole lot of his agreement to go precluded us from divulging that.

Right.

PETCH: But ICAC are looking into it at the moment I'm going to give ICAC evidence on Friday.

Right you'd think you'd think they'd wind that up now although they will probably will grind it out until the bitter end knowing ICAC.

PETCH: Oh no they are going to drop all their claims against us.

Right good um well.

PETCH: Good because they they realise now it was just a ploy on his part to keep himself in employment.

Yeh well just watch your back because you never know with ICAC in a sense that they get they get a sense of duty and they they grind it out past all sensibility.

PETCH: Yeh.

: So let's hope that nothing says that they do drop the thing quickly because you don't need the distraction I am sure.

PETCH: No mate.

: Anyway it's an important distraction out of the way Ivan.

PETCH: Yeah it is

Yeah Ivan you haven't heard from me since the meeting before Christmas because I have been ill again I'm afraid.

PETCH: Yes alright mate.
